

Dear FCC-- I am writing to encourage you to prevent any more consolidation of the ownership of the mass media.

In the few years since corporations were allowed to own more than a single media outlet, I have noticed less controversy. To me, that means that the different opinions have either been eliminated or made to tow the company line.

Either way, it is a compromise of the freedom of speech.

The FCC should specifically focus on promoting differences of opinion. This is how the right decisions are made, by many people that have heard the differing views.

You must stand up to corporate interests and do what is best for the American public. Please do not allow more consolidation, in fact, I think you should make an effort to undo the consolidation that has already taken place.

Thank you.
